Renewable UK and The Crown Estate are pleased to announce the return of the Renewable Energy Health & Safety Award, the only awards scheme of its kind for the renewable energy industry.

The Award aims to promote the development, implementation and sharing of best practice in health and safety across the sector.

The award will be looking for initiatives that demonstrate:

- Outstanding health & safety performance and innovation
- Successful sharing of health & safety best practice
- Substantial impact on risk reduction
- Long term improvement in health & safety performance

The initiative is open to ALL renewable energy technologies from across the life cycle of any project.

Entries will be assessed by a judging panel made up of representatives from across the renewables and health and safety industries.

The judges will be looking for entries that act as a beacon to drive and deliver the highest health and safety standards over what will be a critical stage of growth for the renewable energy sector.

Organisations of any size are eligible, with the judges taking account of resources available to applicants in their submissions.

The judging panel welcomes UK and international applications from across the sector but would particularly welcome those from small & medium enterprises (SME’s), onshore projects and the wave & tidal sector.

Membership of Renewable UK is not a condition of entry and will not influence the selection or awarding process.

Benefits of applying
The application process is far more than just a “tick box” exercise and we would highlight that there are significant benefits than can be realised if you take the time and effort in making an application. Just a few include:
